2010. Hardcover. Book Condition: New. 308 The collection of articles in the book covers various issues relating to law enforcement, good governance, counter-terrorism and human rights. The author has drawn on his rich and varied experience as a law enforcement officer and human rights activist. His cogent analysis and insightful observations throw new lights on many of these issues. The articles reveal his alert and sensitive mind and abiding concern for human rights. They provide valuable insights for properly understanding and appreciating some of the key problems afflicting law enforcement, criminal justice administration and good governance. About The Author:- Sankar Sen, former Director General of the National Human Rights Commission, New Delhi, and former Director of the National Police Academy, Hyderabad, joined Indian Police Service in 1960. He graduated from Presidency College, Calcutta, and obtained Master's Degree in History from Calcutta University. He was allotted to Orissa cadre and held a number of posts with distinction. He served the Border Security Force as Additional Director General. Thereafter he was posted as the Director of SVP National police Academy, (NPA) the premier institution for the training of senior police officers in the country. On completion of his assignment in NPA he joined as the Director General of the National Human Rights Commission. He was instrumental in setting up an excellent Investigation wing of the NHRC. He also functioned later on as the Special Rapporteur in-charge of custodial justice programs for the NHRC. He thoroughly involved himself in the human rights sensitization of the Indian police and improvement of the prison administration. He was awarded the Police Medal for Meritorious Services in 1979 and for Distinguished Service in 1987. He has authored many books including "Police Today", "Human Rights in a Developing Society", "Tryst with Law Enforcement and Human Rights" etc. Presently...
