We sec her comforted and strengthened by the companionship of friends and the ministrations of sympathy and the assurance that her children will fare better in this new land than ever she did in the old and that to them may be opened doors of opportunity and blessing beyond her wildest dreams. IN JAIL AND OUT AGAIN Here is a county jail in the city of the middle West. A young girl but sixteen years of age is crying bitterly in one of the cells. Her mother, a Lithuanian woman, had been obliged to call the police the night before, because the girl had given way to her temper so terribly that no one could do anything with her. Behind the bars for the first time in her life she came to herself and realized the great danger she was in. Without suitable companions of her own age, the parks and the park dances with all their attendant temptations had lured her to questionable associates and late hours. Fortunate for her indeed was her arrest, for at this point God sent a friend, a Schauffler Graduate, a part of whose duty is to visit the jail and help just such lonely and unfortunate girls. Once she understood she had friend, the girl gave her confidence and made her confession. O! I have treated my mother badly but if I can only go home I will stay in and...
