So many trees give their lives in the cause of understanding, improving, dissecting, and building relationships. The lion's share of these books are written about creating positive, helpful environments for reinforcing our relationships. This book is not one of them. You see my problem lies in the fact that these environments must be created. It is difficult enough just to live in and understand the environments in which we find ourselves let alone endeavor to create new ones. I always read these books and got fired up about the ideas in the book and went about creating the new environment the author suggested so I could improve my relationships. The trouble was that I worked so hard creating the environment that I lost sight of the improvements I sought for my relationships. The method became the goal and it never worked for me the way I'd hoped or the way author said it would. After years of frustration I began to wonder how we might better our relationships in the midst of the environment in which we find ourselves. What if we could use our current circumstances and find ways improve our relationships? What if the negative things we all experience in our relationships could somehow be turned into positives? Why can't bad things be used to make good relationships? There are certain negative forces common to the human condition that almost all folks experience: Anger, Unforgiveness, Confrontation, and Discrimination. If there was a way to turn these negatives into positives, it could be revolutionary. Folks could operate within the common circumstances of their interactions and use them to build better...
